Pretty bad technical quality. The resolution is horrible, the interface is not great.. I bought this game after hearing about it on the Co-Optional Podcast. I really dig picross puzzles and eat these things up pretty quick. I've done about 25 of the puzzles so far, of the regular mode. I haven't done any of the other mode yet. So far, the game isn't that great. Paint It Back is better. The way you fill in the puzzle, the game automatically colors it as you go along, making it somewhat confusing sometimes as to what you've done and what's left to do. The music is dumb, I turned it off pretty quick. There aren't any settings to turn the puzzles to a black and white color scheme rather than color, which would have been much better. Every few puzzles there's an annoying pop-up begging you to sign up for a newsletter. After a few "maybe later's" I put in a fake email address to make it quit coming back up again and again. If it was a couple of dollars I'd buy it. I wouldn't buy it at its current price point though.. I heard about this game on the Co-optional podcast. I usually love these kinds of games and so jumped at the chance of buying it. The control scheme is a bit strange, though once you get used to it the numbers on the line when you drag are super useful. The colours are neat, but in some puzzles it gets kind of hard to see what's completed and what's not, especially with gold and yellow tiles or in areas with a bunch of different coloured tiles. The theming is nice though, and the puzzles look pretty nice when you're done. The music is terrible and I turned it off immediately. All in all, it's a decent game for its style but Paint It Back is FAR superior, especially at this price point.. Pretty bad technical quality. The resolution is horrible, the interface is not great..
