For $3 and you have a Vive, get this now. No questions you will love it.. I have about a 3x3(EDIT:whoops, 3x2) space to work with. Therefore, I was able to get away with playing about half a level. Absolutely worth it. I've played much worse for much more than $3. There is absolutely no teleporting. Essentially, transitions happen naturally as you explore smaller rooms in the room allocated in your play area. This really gave me the impression that I was actually walking, sliding along walls, and crawling through a series of rooms in a facility, Also, crawling through vents is more fun than it sounds and should be. If you meet the minimum required space, this is absolutely a no brainer. If you're close to it and don't mind $3 for 15 minutes of fun room exploration, then buy it. Worst case scenario, you'll still walk away from the experience and realize you've regretted more expensive potato chip purchases more than your inexpensive purchase of a fun concept.. Amazingly fun game! I've gotten by playing it in a 3m x 3m room but you still need a lot of space for the game. If you have the space buy the game.. This is pretty cool. It is essentially a five to ten minute long tech demo with maybe a little bit of replayability, but it is quite fun and a good game to introduce friends to VR.. Great experience. Requires loads of space.. The most immersive thing I have ever seen. The game is really quite cool. Don't watch the video above, as it shows the whole game, and try replaying the game after you beat it.. A great use of room scale tracking! You don't ever teleport, only walking and crawling. It makes it feel like you're actually there, as you can just keep moving around without perceiving a limit to your space. It also greatly captures that "sneaky spy infiltrator" feeling.
